

I was very disturbed to learn that the FCC is considering taking priority from the FM translator service and giving it to Low Power FM. This bothers me because I am an avid listener of the FM radio station called K-LOVE. I listen to this station every day, at home and in the car, and my daughter, who is a high school senior, does so as well. I cannot imagine my life without this radio station. It gives so much to the community, offering a positive, toe-tapping alternative to the curse-filled music of the modern day. The music K-LOVE plays teaches listeners moral character, encourages listeners to vote regardless of political affiliation, and gives words to brighten up even the darkest day. I know that, on more than one occasion, it has brightened my spirits. If this station were to be displaced, it would take away all this positive encouragement from the community. It would leave a void that may never be filled again. Obviously, I don't believe that giving priority to the Low Power FM system is the best thing for our community. I beg you to reconsider. Thank you very much.
